

David Bekelman: Thank you for this presentation and for all of your work on understanding complex interventions. Can you please discuss and share resources for best practices on planning process evaluations? I.e., getting from the research question (e.g., why did this complex intervention succeed or fail) to the methods? I ask because I've found sometimes the process evaluation may not yield clear answers despite using mixed methods, in part because the intervention and context are complex.

Katie Klossner: Be sure to join us again tomorrow for COPRH Con Day 3!

Danielle Ostendorf: Thank you!!

Erika Crable (she/her): Thank you!
